

THE WATER QUESTION.

The city, in its "Corporate capacity," ought to undertake to bring water to the city. WE HAVE PAID TRIBUTE TO AN AQUEDUCT CORPORATION LONG ENOUGH. We want water free—free for all—as free as the air we breathe. The Cove-lands, Mill-pond lands, Back-bay-lands, wharves, and indeed every portion of the city would be incalculably benefited by it. All the owners of property in these parts, as well as the poorer classes, are probably nearly unanimous in desiring it. The washer-women and day-laborer now pay as much—often more—for this "element of life," than the most wealthy citizen. This should not be, if we desire temperance and cleanliness.

The old aqueduct corporation propose "to extend their works or to sell out." As regards extending their works, it is hoped the city will have nothing to do with it. If the city find it for their interest to buy, let them buy. It is a thing of small consequence, in an undertaking like this, whether they buy or not.

The whole estimated cost of the Water-works cannot exceed $600,000 or $800,000; and the city lands, if properly disposed of, will go far to meet all this expense. To what better purpose can their proceeds be applied? Let the lands at the bottom of the Common be filled up, laid out in streets, planted with trees, and sold. They are too valuable to lay waste, and their value is too much needed for public purposes. Charles street will then no longer be that bleak and dreary place in winter, and dirty, sultry place in summer, that it now is. Let us have a spacious hotel at the depot, and a block of four story houses across the bottom of the Common! They would rather be an ornament than an injury to the public grounds, especially if, upon opening of 300 or 400 feet be left from Charles street to the water, for a public square, planted with trees.

I perfectly agree with the sentiments of a late writer in your paper, who says—"My idea of this project is to furnish every individual now in the city, or who may hereafter be in the city, an abundant supply of pure water for all necessary and useful purposes, free of expense to him, except for the fixtures for conveying it from the water-pipes to his dwelling and to the place where he uses it; and that the expense of this work, and the whole expense, shall be borne by a tax laid upon every thing taxable until it is paid, in the same manner as money is raised for any other object by a tax on the city." This is precisely what should be done—and done as soon as may be! It is hoped we shall not much longer delay this momentous enterprise! Let us act rather than talk. The question has been fairly canvassed, and it is hoped, is at length approximating its consummation. The popular voice is raised in its favor by a vote of sixteen to one. No enterprise, ever undertaken by Boston, is of such moment to all classes, and particularly to the causes of "temperance and morality."

Temperance, cleanliness, and sobriety, so important to the population of a great city, demand that water be furnished, of a good quality, and copiously, both for public and private uses. If we wish the temperate to use their water without rum, let us offer it to them "pure and free."

To render the supply of "pure water" copious and convenient to every part of the city, and sufficient for fountains in the squares and public places, five millions of gallons will be wanted daily. Edinburgh, at an expense of only £175,000, receives a supply of water from a distance of 8 or 10 miles, sufficient to furnish nineteen gallons to each person daily. The New River London Aqueduct Company furnish, on an average, 197 gallons daily to each family, which, at 7 in a house, would be 28 gallons to each person. It is thought 100 gallons per day will not be too much for each family for the purposes of bathing, washing, cooking, drinking, and the like. Philadelphia requires, through the summer months, about 2,000,000 gallons daily, and when the "streets are washed by means of fire plugs," about 3,000,000 gallons.

The water furnished by the aqueducts of Rome was equal to a river 30 feet wide and 6 feet deep, flowing 30 inches a second. I have only to say again, "gives us water freely!"

AN OWNER OF REAL ESTATE.

Ballooning.—The Duke of Brunswick took an umbrella with him in his balloon ascension with Mrs. Graham. Upon the descent of the balloon, His Royal Highness, when within three or four feet of the ground jumped from the car, which so lightened it that the balloon rose immediately with Mrs. Graham, who leaped from her seat at a distance of thirty feet from the earth, and was seriously, if not mortally injured. The English papers make themselves very ridiculous by the minute manner in which they describe every thing connected with Royalty; one of them says that the Duke came on the ground a little after three o'clock, accompanied by a gentleman and several elegantly dressed ladies. He was dressed in a chocolate coat, dark waistcoat, and light trousers, and blue silk handkerchief with gold spots. His hat was of the Quaker make. Mrs. Graham wore a blue silk cottage bonnet, and green silk pelisse. The harmony of all these colors would, however, be incomplete, if it were not stated that the Duke carried a red, and Mrs. Graham a white flag—which flags they continued to wave, amidst the plaudits of the spectators, until they were out of sight. Another touch of color, after all, is necessary to complete the picture. "The Duke's cheeks," it is remarked, "appeared flushed at first," but afterwards, "they paled, we thought, of paleness."

Correction.—We are satisfied that the rumor which obtained circulation in this city, on the 4th instant, and published in our paper on the 5th, that the "Steward" of the steamer Rhode Island was implicated in the recent robbery of $39,000 was entirely unfounded; and if any other Journal copied the paragraph from the Post, it will only be an act of justice towards the steward to correct a misstatement so injurious to his character. There never has been any ground of suspicion against him, and we learn that his character is wholly unimpaired. He is now in this city.

The Northampton Courier, in alluding to the fashion of small sleeves for ladies' dresses, says—"There is nothing we shudder at so much as the sight of a lady in 'small clothes.'"

The steamboat Illinois, which ran between St. Louis and Peoria, was partly sunk in the Illinois river, on the 19th ult., by running on a log on a bar.

Incendiaries.—Several successive attempts have been made by these rascals to fire Troy, N. Y.

The Massachusetts Spy relates a case of horrid death, in consequence of disease produced by the excessive use of ardent spirits. Mr. James Stone, of Northborough, on returning from his work on Thursday evening last, did not find his wife at home, but supposing her to have gone to her mother-in-law's, he was not alarmed at the circumstance. On the following morning he went to the well to draw a pail of water, and to his horror found his wife dead at the bottom of the well. It appeared on the coroner's inquest, that she was subject to fits of delirium tremens, and they gave a verdict—that she came to her death by drowning in a well, into which she threw herself while in a fit of derangement caused by the excessive use of ardent spirits.—Daily.

"The Gauge of Honor."—At a recent militia muster in a neighboring State, the following veritable incident actually occurred, and we publish it as we received it, without any trimmings of our own. After the severe duties of a review and a sham fight were over, the Brigadier General and his Staff repaired to the principal Hotel in the vicinity of the bloodless battle-field, to dine. A number of subalterns, non-commissioned officers and privates, followed the example of their superiors, and by dinner time they all found themselves members of one company. The dinner consisted of corn beef, and smoked ham, with "apple sass," and quantum suff. of cabbage, potatoes and squash, together with six bottles of pale wine, like thin glue, for forty-two persons. Although the General had not invited the large company seated at the table with him, still since they were there, he felt strongly inclined to do the handsome thing, and foot the bill, if it were not too savage. He accordingly despatched Corporal N. to reconnoitre the landlady's calculations. Thus instructed, the Corporal obtained an interview with "mine hostess," and the following conversation took place:—

Corporal—Ma'm, the General would like to know the damage for his dinner.

Landlady—Why, on such a day as this, I 'spose we ought to get a little more than common, because, you know, of the extra trouble, and such a confusion; but seeing it's the Gin'ral, we'll make it low, and only say fifteen shillins.

Corporal—What! fifteen shillings for a dinner!

Landlady—O, no, dear; not altogether for the dinner, for two-and-three-pence goes for baiting his horse; and prime oats he had, too, I guess.

Corporal—Well, what do you calculate to charge me and the rest of us a-piece?

Landlady—Why, the same, to be sure—fifteen shillins.

Corporal—Me fifteen shillings! Why I haven't any horse!

Landlady—I know that; but you have had the honor of dining with the Gin'ral and the Field Officers; and I reckon that's about equal to baiting a horse—aint it!

The statements published in several of the morning papers, yesterday, relative to an altercation between Mr. Everett, of Newton, and a man named Bowen, were incorrect in many particulars. A pamphlet, attributing to Mr. E. what he never wrote, and what he opposed at the time of its adoption by the whig state committee, was left at his door a short time since by direction of a committee of whig partisans, to which Bowen belongs. Mr. E. meeting B., as has been described, inquired of him why he had misrepresented him in the manner he had? B. in reply substantially admitted that he knew the matter referred to was not written by Mr. E., when Mr. E. described this base attempt to impose upon the citizens of his District in the terms it merited, for which Bowen applied to him the epithet of "puppy," and in return Mr. E. boxed his ears for his impudence with his umbrella—Bowen attempted to seize hold of Mr. Everett's clothes, but was prevented by Mr. Jackson, and thus the affair ended.

Pennsylvania Election.—A few returns only have been received; the whigs have carried the city of Philadelphia by about 2000, their usual majority. When we reflect that Philadelphia is the seat of the principal whig machinery—Bank, Biddle, and all, and that their gain there in this desperate contest has been but trifling, we have reason to anticipate the most glorious results from the contest in the interior.

A few returns have been received from Georgia, but not enough to indicate at all the result of the election.

The College of Electors has not been organized in Maryland, the Baltimore Republican says—

"We tell the anti-reformers now, as we have always told them, that no Senate can or will be elected. All therefore that remains to be done is to prepare for the formation of a new constitution, and our opponents may just as well conclude at once to join with us in its formation."

Gen. Harrison ought to be adored by the whigs. Who could more faithfully carry out their principles? The General was the friend of the administration of old John Adams, under which the Alien and the Gag Laws, and the Stamp Act were passed, and the window and whiskey taxes imposed. The General is jam-up-blue-light-federal all over.

Prodigious.—The Atlas is in the horrors that Judge Morton should be, from principle, against Masonic oaths. It has the hysterics that this opinion should have been expressed by the Judge some years since, from the Bench, in a trial then pending before him. Would it not be well for the Atlas to ask the Judge to change his opinion to oblige him?

A letter from a friend residing in the Western part of the State, says—

"I think we may safely calculate upon a majority in the four Western Counties."

Florida has now become the sole theatre of Indian hostilities, and public attention is closely directed to the operations in that quarter.

From the South.—We have Charleston papers to the evening of the 5th inst., inclusive. The cholera was almost extinct, a sudden change of weather having all but banished it from the city. A heavy white frost covered the ground on the morning of last Wednesday, and fires and great coats were very comfortable.

Mr. Pinckney has been nominated for Congress by a respectable meeting of citizens of Charleston, in opposition to Mr. Legare.

The bridge over Edisto river, in the line of the railroad, was destroyed by fire on the night of the 4th. The act of an incendiary.

From the East Indies.—The Straits of Malacca and the adjacent coasts continue to be much infested with pirates, as we learn from the Singapore Chronicle of April 23rd. Two British men-of-war were cruising in the Straits, in search of the marauders, who are said to be more than usually bold and numerous.

Lord Auckland, the new governor general, arrived at Calcutta early in April.

Advices from Manila to the 19th of March state that about 50,000 piculs of the sugar crop had been contracted for on American account. The last price paid was $5.75, the dollar, 6 mo. st. and likely to rise, as bills were difficult to negotiate.

Death of William S. Appleton.—Died at Schaffhausen, on the Rhine, in Switzerland, on the 25th of August, WILLIAM S. APPLETON, (eldest son of William S. Appleton, Esq., of this city,) in the 21st year of his age. He left home last autumn, to visit the most attractive parts of Europe, under the most favorable circumstances. While in Italy, pulmonary disease assailed him. His progress was rapid. He crossed the alpine region in the hope of returning to his native land; but having reached Schaffhausen, his disease had so far subdued him that he could proceed no further, and he was finished his short life; and though in a foreign land, not without the consolation which affectionate and assiduous friends and relatives could impart.—Atlas.

It is our painful duty to announce the death of the Rev. Asa Meser, D. D., LL. D. and for a long period the President of Brown University. He departed this life on the night of Tuesday last, in the 68th year of his age. He presided over Brown University from 1822, until his resignation in 1826, and conducted the affairs of the college with a success highly honorable to his talents and learning.—Providence Courier.

A letter received by a gentleman of this city, conveys the unpleasant intelligence of the death of General JOHN COFFEE of Georgia; he died at his residence, in Telfair county, on Sunday, the 25th ultimo, at half past 2 o'clock, after an illness of six days.—Globe.

POLICE COURT.

Ellen, the cook, was too honest to deny that she occasionally drank, but indignantly repelled the charge that she spilt the roast in consequence. She regarded the insinuation as a base stab under the fifth rib of her professional reputation. It was said that within the last three months, there had been fifteen times when she didn't know her head from her elbow. This she accounted for medicinally—it is allowable to take take the vital as physic, and it sometimes operates very powerfully. "I have a pain in my side," said she; "and I sometimes take a little spirit to relieve me. I don't take any stated quantity, but just as it may happen to make me feel right." It was adjudged that her principal disorder could be treated to the most advantage by the skillful physician of the House of Correction, and she was accordingly sent to that moral hospital, for five months.

Honoria grasped the rail with energy, and regarded with disdain the Court and witness, who accused her of unlawful lubricating; but when it was stated that her loving husband was the secret conspirator against her liberty, and the sole instigator of the prosecution—

"Ingratitude more strong than traitors' arms, Quite vanquished her, then—burst her mighty heart."

Burying her face in her handkerchief, she abandoned herself to her only friends—her scalding tears. Two months.

Jacob Wedger, in the employ of Mr. J. Dunham, at South Boston, was sent over to the city, with $12.00, to purchase some white lead. Jacob had not been in the habit of having so much of the ready, and thrust in his pockets. As soon as he got into town, he entered into a speculation with a seller of small drinks. Wedger traded away some of his master's cash, and all of his own wit. In the course of the afternoon, "he became sensible of his lost condition," and emigrated to Salem, where he was arrested. He had not saved a single mag of the $12.00. Two months in the House of Correction.

Jack Bonfield was on the eve of sailing, but had no clothes—chest, nor money to buy one with—therefore, he rather impudently took a spare one from the door of Mr. Kimball's store, in Ann street. Arrested by Ellis, and committed to jail for the lack of the wherewithal to mollify the wrath of the law.

Henry Outfield was altogether too fond of the extract of barley-corn. The query was, not how often he got drunk, but whether he were ever sober? Answer—No! Judgment four months.

Mary Ann Quinn submissively received the behests of the Court for playing harlequin's nights. Six months.

One's Apparel should be consistent with his employment.—Yesterday was a fine sunny day, and a young gent was tempted to mount white pants and a white jacket; but getting into jail in Water street, was rolled in the mud, and at the conclusion looked quite "beau nauty."

We understand that whenever the Lexington leaves Providence in company with any of the Transportation Company's boats, the fare in the latter will be only one dollar.
